

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

INTRODUCTION.

THE items in this genealogy were originally collected while searching for the American ancestor of the author, and are now published at the earnest request of a number of the members of the family. Much matter of interest relating to the early family was found in this research, among which, beside ancient pedigrees, is the sketch of Coity Castle, the ruins of which are herein illustrated. "Fair Coity," as it was called in ancient chronicles, was near Bridgend, on the river Agmore, on the southern coast of Wales—the land of medieval song and story. The name in Welsh is Coed-ty, signifying wood house. Undoubtedly, in the remote past, a house of wood stood upon the site of the later castle. The stone castle was built by Sir Simmonet Turberville about 1120, and became, two centuries later, the home of the Gamage family for many generations, until it was sacked and nearly demolished by Cromwell. It is the largest ruin in Wales, except that of Caerphilly, and was recently purchased by Lord Dunraven, on whose estate it bordered. It will now be preserved from further depredations.

CHRONOLOGICAL RECORD.

At the time of the Norman invasion Wales was governed by a number of petty kings. They were:

Gwaethford, whose arms were—Or, a lion rampant, regardant, sable, crowned gules. Crest, a black cock. Motto, "Si Deus nobis, quis contra nos."

Jestyn ap Gwrgan—Arms: Gules, three chevronelles argent. Crest, a Paschal lamb. Motto, "Vincet qui partitur."

Einion ap Collwyn. Arms: A chevron between three fleur-de-lys.

Bledlri ap Cadivor, of Cilsant. Arms: Argent, a lion rampant, gardant sable. Crest, griffin segreant, or.

Bleddyn ap Maenarch.

The Morgan and Vaughn descendants carry the Cadivor arms, and the Gamages carry the same crest.

After the Conquest there was added to these princely rulers the Herbert family, the Gower family and the Advenæ, as the Normans were called. The Gamage family came under the head of the Advenæ, they being of the Norman conquerors who married Welsh heiresses. The last of the British race who was lord of Coity was Morgan (ap Megryg, ap Griffith, ap Jestyn, ap Gwrgan), who was King of Glamorgan and Prince of the Seven Cantredes of Saluria, which country included all the territory between Gloucester Bridge and the river Towy.

Of Morgan's daughter, Sar, the following story is related in old manuscripts: Payne Turberville, one of Fitz-Hammon's knights, who came for the spoliation of Wales in 1089, finding that no grant of land had been made to him, demanded his share. Fitz-Hammon replied, "There are men and arms, go, get it where you can." Turberville set his eyes on "Fair Coity" and commanded Morgan to give it up. Morgan took his daughter by one hand and, with drawn sword in the other, replied, "If you marry my daughter and come to my castle like an honest man you may have it, if not, let my arm and sword and those of yours decide who shall call the castle his own." Turberville surrendered his sword, took the daughter's hand, married her, and so came into possession of the lordship of Coity. Their descendants, "of Coity," were as follows:

Simmonet—2. Son of Payne Turberville (1). He erected the new castle about the year 1120.

Sir Payne—3. Married Matilda, daughter of Morgan Gam, (ap Caradoc, ap Jestyn, ap Gwrgan).

Sir Gilbert—4. Had two sons, Payne and Gilbert.

Sir Payne—5. He died without issue and was succeeded by his brother,

Sir Gilbert—5. He married Meiwen, daughter of Lord Cadwgan (whose estate or castle was on the river Alain. A son of Ithel, descended from Jestyn ap Gwrgan). Their son was

Sir Gilbert—6. His son was

Sir Richard—7. Sir Richard's fourth son was

Sir Payne—8. He married Gwenllian, daughter of Sir Richard Talbot. They had four sons: Gilbert, Richard, Simmonet, Edward, and four daughters: Agnes, who married Sir John de la Bere, lord of Weobly Castle in Gower; Margaret, who married Sir Richard Stackpole of Pembroke; Catherine, who married Sir Roger Berkerolles of New Orchard, in St. Athans; he was lord of St. Athans; and Sarah, who married Sir William Gamage, lord of Roggiet, Monmouthshire, six and a half miles from Chepstow.

Sir Gilbert—9. He left no legitimate children, and was followed by his brother, Sir Richard—9. He, also, left no legitimate heirs, but a natural son, Simmonet, took possession of the estates upon Sir Richard's death. He was not allowed to remain, as Sir Richard had settled the whole estate upon his nephew, Sir Laurence Berkerolles, lord of St. Athans, son of his sister Catherine.

Sir Laurence next succeeded to the estates and lordship of Coity. He married Matilda, daughter of Sir Thomas de Spencer, then lord of Glamorgan, who lived at the castle Caerphilly. Lady Matilda poisoned her husband, Sir Laurence, and was buried alive, agreeable to the sentence pronounced upon her (according to the country law) by the Lord Sir Richard Beegan. After the death of Sir Laurence Berkerolles the property passed to Sir William Gamage.

The estate had now descended three times by distaff (heiresses), hence, according to custom, the lordship over courts of justice and seigniorie reverted to the King or Crown; but the Gamage were lords of the land, and to them appertained the possessions and manorial supremacy of the estates.

GAMACHES IN NORWAY AND ENGLAND.

The name Gamache, later Gamage, is of ancient origin, and is traced in France to Inczar, who came with Rolla the Dane to the coast of France in 912, in search of lands or booty. These northern pirates, for as such they were regarded, had become such a terror, not only to the people but to the crown, that Charles the Simple gave to Rolla a portion of the province of Neustria, and Rolla gave to his companions landed estates in this province that they called Normandy. The name de Gamache was for several generations famous in the military and literary world of France, but is now dropping out of the lists of noted names as the years bring greater numbers to fill the records. Among the most conspicuous were:

Joachim Rounalt Gamache, a French officer, born at Poitou. He fought against the English in 1450. Louis XI. made him Marshal of France, 1461. He died, 1478.

Phillip de Gamache, born 1568, Professor of Divinity at Sorbonne 25 years. His works were called the "dictionary of fine thought." A man of sterling character as well as of talent. In his relations with Richelieu he displayed integrity, firmness and honorable pride. He died at Paris, 1625.

Etienne Simon Gamache, born at Meulon, 1672. Canon regular. He published "Système du Cœur" in 1704, and was considered one of the most graceful and versatile of writers; equally learned on moral or scientific subjects. He was a member of the French Academy and wrote under the nom de plume of "Clarigny."

The following early pedigree has been collected from reliable English and French publications:

GAMACHES OF NORMANDY.

1. INCZAR received lands called "Gamache Marshes," in Viskin, in the Archdeaconry of and near Rouen, from which lordship and estates the family name is derived. His son was
2. COUNT HERLUIN, whose paternal grandson,
4. WILLIAM, married Alice, sister of Hugh Capet, King of France. Their son was
5. BERNARD DE GAMACHE, Count de Guines and Lord de Gamache. He also became Count de St. Valeri by marriage with the heiress. His son was
6. GILBERT DE GAMACHE, who married Papia, daughter of Richard, second Duke of Normandy. Their paternal grandsons, Bernard 8 and Reginald 8 came to England with William the Conqueror. They were lords of St. Valeri, which, by the marriage of a descendant of Bernard's, an heiress, passed to the Counts de Dreux. After remaining some time in England, Bernard returned to France, leaving his English estates to his brother.

8. REGINALD DE GAMACHE, whose estates were in Hereford, the western part of England. His son,
9. SIR THOMAS DE GAMACHE, married Joan, daughter of Roger Arnold, Esquire, of Monmouthshire, the first of the Arnolds to adopt a surname. His son was
10. SIR GODFREY DE GAMACHE, who served Henry II. with fifty knights and one thousand retainers. He gave the name Mansel Gamache to his estates in Herefordshire. He still held estates in Viskin, near Rouen. In 1159 he received from Henry II. a grant of land in Hottesdon, Salop County; and in 1172, from Richard I., the estate of Marmshall. He was the ancestor of the Gamaches of Royiade (or Roggiet) of Monmouthshire, and of Coity, Glamorganshire. He also held two knights' fees under the Lacys in Hereford. He died before 1176, leaving Sir Mathew and William.

SIR MATHEW received from King John estates in Dymock, called Gamache Hall; and also estates in Gloucestershire. He returned to Normandy, leaving his estates to his brother,

11. SIR WILLIAM DE GAMAGE, who adopted the change in the name from Gamache to Gamage. He married Lisabet, daughter and co-heir of Henry de Mineris (son of Sir William Myners). He was custor (keeper) of Ludlow Castle in or before 1201. He also held Mansel, Gamage Hall in Dymock, Gloucester, granted by King John in 1199; and lands in Hereford, Rutland and Gloucester. He died before 1240, and left three sons—Sir Godfrey, Sir Henry and John.

SIR GODFREY acquired lands in the Welsh marshes. He died in 1253, leaving wife Alda and three daughters. The estates of Gamage Hall passed to the Penwardine and Pembruge (or Pembridge) families by the marriage of the heiress. The estate was still called Gamage Hall as late as 1569.

JOHN DE GAMAGE was Prior of St. Guthlake, Hereford, and also Abbot of Gloucester. He was sixty-two years a monk of the Abbey and twenty-three years its abbot. The royal assent to his election was dated October 4, 1284. In 1303 he built a new dormitory for the monks. In 1305 he entertained, at a long-remembered festival, the King's Judges, who sat upon an inquest of Traylibastion, in the great hall of the Abbey. He died May 15, 1306 or 1307, leaving the reputation of a pious and frugal man, who found the Abbey one thousand marks in debt and left it wealthy, increasing its fold of sheep ten thousand. He was a liberal donor of books and ornaments. He was buried near the door of the cloister, where may be seen a portion of his family's arms, cut in the stone—"portions of the three escollopes," says "Guillams." A short time before his death, while attending at the funeral of the Queen Mother, at Amesbury, Wiltshire, King Edward I., surrounded by the Prelates of England, declared :

"Non apparet nisi tam venerabilis pater in regno, mio sicut Abbas Gloucestriensis."

12. SIR HENRY DE GAMAGE, second son of Sir William, married Ela, daughter of Sir Milo de Regni, widow of Sir Simon de Raleigh; probably the heiress who carried the Dinas, Povis and Winster estates into the Raleigh family. His son was
13. SIR GODFRED DE GAMAGE, the reputed founder of the Monmouthshire family. He married Joan, daughter of Gilbert Strongbow, and held Royiade, six and a half miles from Chepstow, southwest. His son was
14. SIR PAYNE DE GAMAGE. He was lord of Royiade, under the lordship of Striguil. He married Margaret, daughter of Roger St. Pierre. It is with Sir Payne that the pedigree of the house of Coity begins. His sons were Sir Robert, and Andrew Payan, who married a daughter of Elizabeth and William Kenneys.
15. SIR ROBERT DE GAMAGE. In a Presentment of the "Freeholders of Wentwood (Gwent or Wales)," it says, "Robert and his ancestors always had rights in Wentwood to the house at Rogiet." He held Mansel Gamage, in Hereford County. He married the heiress of Martel Llahangel, of Rogiet. His sons were Sir William, and John of Rodley, County Gloucester, who had a son, Thomas, 1346. The Gamages were "Lords of the Marches," which means they were noblemen who, in times past, inhabited and made secure the marches of Wales and Scotland, ruling as petty kings, enforcing their own private laws; whose soldiers were marched up and down upon the boundary to the west and south, to prevent depredations from pirates and highwaymen. The custom was abolished by Henry VIII.

16. SIR WILLIAM DE GAMAGE was Sheriff of Gloucester in 1325. He was in the suite of Robert Fitz Payn, attending King Edward II. in 1313. He married Sarah, fourth daughter of Payn Turberville of Coity Castle, Glamorgan, and co-heir with her brother Gilbert. His son was
17. SIR GILBERT DE GAMAGE of Royiade. He married Lettice, daughter of Sir William Seymour of Penbow. His son was
18. SIR WILLIAM DE GAMAGE of Royiade. He obtained Coity Castle on the death of Sir Laurence Berkerolles of New Orchard, Lord of St. Athan. He married Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Radburgh. Their children were Sir Thomas, and Margaret, who married Sir Richard de Beere, who received as crest, for his services at Cressy, "Five ostrich feathers issuing from a ducal coronet." He lived to be very aged. By the inquisition taken in 1419-20, it appears "Sir William Gamage, Knight, died seized of Coity Castle—two parts of the manor and lordship—of Glamorgan—Lanhany Manor, the Advourson of the church, Newland Manor—Tenements in Coity, called Laurensland—Jordan Place or Fairfield, Newcastle Hundreds, and Manor. He took a Seige from Glyndwr and in 1404 the Commons prayed Henry IV. to take steps for his relief." His son was
19. SIR THOMAS GAMAGE of Coity and Rogiett. He married Matilda, daughter of Sir John Dennis (whose arms were: Gules, three leopards' heads jessant, fleur-de-lis or, over all bend engrailed azure). Sir Thomas dropped the "de" from the name. His successors are said to be "of Coity."
20. SIR JOHN GAMAGE married the daughter and co-heir of Morgan Llewellyn (ap Evan Llewellyn of Radiz, ap Cynorig, ap Howell, ap Modroc, ap Jestyn, ap Gwrgan, whose arms are quartered with the Gamage arms), with whom he owned lands afterwards known as Gamage lands, in Miskin, or Viskin, France. His children were Morgan, William, Jenet, who married William, ap Robert Mathews of Castell y Mynack; and Margaret, who married Hugh Fleming.
21. SIR MORGAN GAMAGE. He married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Roger Vaughn of Tretower County (Brecon, Lord of Cantriff, Celiff, Penkelly, Merthn Cynoc, &c., and half brother to William, Earl of Pembroke). Arms of Vaughn are said to be the same as Cadivor; Argent, a lion, rampant; gardant, sable.

His children were :

- i. THOMAS.
 - ii. ELIZABETH, m. (1) John Straddling; m. (2) John ap Howell, ap John Price of Glyn Nedd.
 - iii. MARGARET, m. (1) Jenkin Thomas of Llanvehangel; m. (2) James Turberville of Llantwitt Major.
 - iv. JANE, m. Sir William Bawdripp of Penmark.
 - v. ANN, m. Robert Raglan of Llantwitt.
 - vi. CATHERINE, m. (1) Reginald Powell of Perthir; m. (2) William Stanton of Horningham.
 - vii. WILLIAM, m. Thomas ap Meyric.
22. SIR THOMAS GAMAGE married Margaret, daughter of Sir John St. John of Tonman Castle, Glamorgan and Bletso Park, whose wife was daughter of Morgan Jenkins Philips, paternally descended from Bleddri, Lord of Kilsant, ap Cadivor. He married (2) Joyce, daughter of Sir Richard Croft of Croft Castle.

Children were by first wife :

- i. ROBERT.
 - ii. JOHN had son WESENHAM, whose sons were :
ROGER, a merchant tailor of London, buried Oct. 10, 1548.
(Left a son, John, bapt. Sept. 13, 1547; and a daughter, Elizabeth), and ANTHONY, alderman of London.
 - iii. EDWARD.
 - iv. CATHERINE, m. Sir Thomas Straddling.
 - v. MARY, m. Walter Herbert of Swansea.
 - vi. MARGARET, m. Lord William Howard; later Duke of Norfolk, mother of Charles Howard, beheaded. She d. May, 1581; and her husband d. Jan. 11, 1572-3. Both laid in vault under Ryegate Church.
 - vii. ELIZABETH, m. (1) Richard Wogan, Esq., of Pembroke Co.; m. (2) Jenkin Gwyn.
23. SIR ROBERT GAMAGE. He is said by one authority to have married Joan, daughter of Sir Philip Campernon, of Dartington; by another, to have married Joan, daughter of Sir Philip Seymour. He had a very celebrated plea with St. John of Bletso and Basset of Baupre, co-heirs with him, of Sir John and Sir Laurence Berkerolles for the possession of Coity, in which case he was successful. They had

Children :

- i. SIR JOHN.
- ii. THOMAS.
- iii. MARGARET, m. Miles Mathews of Landaff; m. (2) Thomas Lewis of Van; m. (3) Capt. Herbert of Cardiff.
- iv. MARY, m. William Lewis of St. Pierre.
- v. ELIZABETH, m. Watkin Lougher of Tythestow.
- vii. JOYCE, m. Roger Arnold* of Llantrey, Monmouthshire.

24. SIR JOHN GAMAGE married Wenlien, daughter and co-heir of Sir Thomas ap Jenkyn Powell of Glymoyer. They had Barbara, sole heiress, born 1561; died at Penshurst Castle, Kent, May 26, 1621. She was a very considerable heiress, and her property, birth and connections brought her many suitors. She was a favorite lady in waiting at the Court of Elizabeth, who married her to Robert, son of Sir Henry Sydney. This Robert was a younger brother to the celebrated Sir Philip Sydney, by whose untimely death he became the head of his house and heir to his uncle, Sir Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester. Robert Sydney was born 1653, made member of Parliament for Glamorgan 1585, In 1586, accompanied by his uncle, the Earl of Warwick, he was knighted at Flushing. In 1605 he was created Viscount de L'Isle, and in 1616 received the Garter. In 1618 he succeeded to the Earldom of Leicester, his mother being the sister of Robert Dudley. Lady Barbara lived to share all her husband's honors, whom she survived. Her portrait, with those of her children, still grace the walls of Penshurst. In the Sydney armorial shield the last four quarterings are due to the Gamage family. The Gamage arms are: Argent, five fusils in bend, gules: on a chief azure, three escollops, or, Crest, a griffin segreant, or. The home life of Lady Barbara is made memorable by Ben Jonson in his poem "To Penshurst." With her the titled line of Gamage ended.

There has been a tradition in the New England families of all branches, that brothers settled in America, but no one of the last three generations has been able to say whom they were, or whence they came; and it has been only by a long and diligent search through church, town and probate records that the New England family has been traced back to John Gamage of Ipswich, Mass.; beside whom, there died in Boston, 1729, "Thomas Gamage, formerly of Taunton, Eng'd," no descendants of whom have been found.

There was a Thomas Gamage of Taunton, a convicted rebel, transported February, 1685, in ship John Friggat, of Bristol, and sold to Ann Salop, in Barbadoes, with ten others.—(Hotten's Emigrants). If a rebel at that time, he must have been in Cromwell's second army and, after the Restoration, arrested; or in Monmouth's Rebellion of 1684-5. He probably received a sentence of fifteen or twenty years' servitude, after which he, naturally, came to Massachusetts to be near his brother, who had escaped from England during her troublous era, and long before his own exile. He settled in Boston, a place offering larger facilities for trade than Ipswich. He was a merchant clothier (seller of cloth). We note that two daughters of John were married in Boston, without doubt, from the home of Thomas.

It is only in the line of Thomas, second son of Sir Robert, (23) that the names John and Thomas occur as brothers. This suggestion of relationship offers a clew for further research. It is hoped that at no far distant day we may be able to place our New England ancestors in the line of direct descent, and, with the knowledge of an ancient and honorable lineage, there should be some of the younger generations incited to pursue a systematic research in England to accomplish this object. The collateral line in which the names John and Thomas are associated is as follows:

1. THOMAS, second son of Sir Robert, (23) bore arms Argent, on a bend azure, three mascles of the first, a chief of the second charged with three escollops, or, quartered with arms of Vaughn. He married Joan, daughter of William ap Thomas Vaughn, whose arms were: Argent, a lion rampant, gardant, sable. Their children were: John and Edward.
2. JOHN, m. Ann Jones, sister of D. Jones, chancellor of Worcester, Llandaff. Children were: Robert,³ Edward,³ Morgan,³ Thomas,³ Edmund.³
3. ROBERT had Robert, Edward, Francis, Mary, Edward, son of Robert,³ m. a daughter of Sir Rawley Bussy; had John, Edward, Thomas and Francis.

MORGAN,³ had Morgan.

THOMAS,³ Parson at St. Bride's, Minor, had John, Edward, Thomas, Philip. The two last went to London in King Charles' troops.

EDMUND,³ Parson of Coy Church; m. Mary, daughter of Edward Jenkins of Cowbridge. Children were: Thomas, Edward, John, Mary, Sarah, Ann. Parson Edmund Gamage d. 1705.

The homes of the Gamage family were in the counties of Glamorgan, Hereford, Gloucester and Somerset shires, with the exception of the few who went to London, whose records could be easily traced.

Authority is found for these early pedigrees in "Clark's Glamorgan Pedigrees" and "Sir Thomas Nicholas' Antiquities of Wales." As all the Gamage families of Great Britain sprang from these, the New England family can be no exception. To know one's ancestry, to be assured that honor and courage are one's inheritance, is a much desired knowledge; yet one need seek no farther back than the seventeenth century to find courage, fortitude and Christian faith—those virtues whose lustre shines with a brilliancy that lights the long pathway of time, that those who walk therein may revere, emulate and honor.

These virtues were possessed in an eminent degree by that company of early emigrants who settled these shores. Imagine, if possible, the final, painful parting from the land of their birth, the last loving clasp of friendly hands, the tearful, heartbreaking embrace of parents and family—the slow, comfortless voyage of months duration, the early life in an unsettled country, where privation, disease and death lurked in every shadow, a prey to wild beasts and fiercer savages. Yet their hearts were strengthened, for faith sustained them in their hours of need. That, indeed, was "the time that tried men's souls." Their struggles and trials were not in vain. It is impossible for us to appreciate the inestimable blessings bequeathed us until we consider the countless thousands who yearly, fleeing from the cruelty and tyranny of the eastern world, rush hither to share with us our rich inheritance.

Let us write these ancestral names in letters of gold upon our hearts, emulate their virtues, perpetuate and reverence their memory in the land the Lord their God gave them. The Gamage family is not numerous, neither has it produced celebrated men; but its members have ever been loyal, law-abiding citizens, generally prosperous, with a marked tendency to be the proprietors of any business, however small, in which they engage. They are not agriculturists, but possess a taste for medicine, music, study or mechanics, in the latter of which they show, in a remarkable degree, a nicety of workmanship. They have ever commanded the respect of the community in which they resided and held offices of local trust, though politics never appealed to their tastes.

It has been the privilege of the author, with the assistance of Mrs. Louise Fisher McLain, D. A. R.; Mrs. Caroline Fisher Bogardus, D. A. R.; Mrs. Addie Gamage Gleason, D. A. R.; Olonzo Gamage, M. D.; Prof. Frederick Gamage and Mr. Park T. Burrows, to place a stone, marking the tomb in the First Parish Cemetery of Cambridge, Mass., where so many of the early family were laid away. It is hoped that the spot may soon be determined and marked where rests the dust of our ancestor, John Gamage of Ipswich.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

Roman numerals at the left of Christian names denote the number of children in the family of Gamage.

The number following a name denotes the generation to which such person belongs, and in which their record will be found.

Blank pages are left for corrections and additions, as it is almost impossible that there should not be mistakes or omissions in a work of this nature.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN GAMAGE

OF IPSWICH, MASS.

JOHN¹ GAMAGE of Ipswich, Mass., the ancestor of the family in New England, is first known as a soldier in King Phillips' War, 1675, serving under Col. Samuel Appleton. The date of his death has not been found, neither his burial place. He was, without doubt, laid in the Knight tomb. He married Mary, daughter of Alexander Knight. She married, second, Henry Osborn, and had one son, Henry, later of Newport, R. I., as mentioned in will of his half-brother, John. In deed of sale of real estate, 1734, Mary Osborn sells land left her "by her father, Alexander Knight," and calls herself "widow of Henry Osborn." In her will, made Sept. 10, 1734, she leaves estate left her "by her brother — (blurred) Knight, to her beloved son, John Gamage, with whom she lived, who had so tenderly and faithfully cared for her in her old age." Her place of burial has not been found.

Children of John and Mary Gamage were :

- i. JOHN, b. February 6, 1676; m. Hannah Adams. He died April 25, 1753. In his will he mentions "children of his brother Joshua," "children of his brother Nathaniel," and names "Cousin William of Watertown" as executor (cousin meaning nephew). The latter, in papers of settlement, calls John "Uncle." His wife died March 10, 1753. They left no children.
- ii. NATHANIEL,² b. Feb., 1678. He died about 1741. In this year a guardian was appointed for minor son, John. No further records can be found of either.
- iii. MARY, b. July 15, 1681, m. in Boston, April 25, 1706, Samuel Bridgeman.
- iv. JOSHUA.²
- v. SARAH, m. in Boston, Dec. 4, 1707, Samuel Roberts.

SECOND GENERATION.

JOSHUA.² GAMAGE was a weaver by trade and settled in Cambridge, Mass., about 1708. He was admitted to membership in First Parish Church in 1727. The date of his death has not been found, but it was later than 1744, as he bought land in Attleborough in that year. He was laid in a tomb of First Parish Cemetery. It was the custom at that early date to allow members of the church to select their last resting places in the churchyard, hence the irregularity noticeable in old graveyards. His wife died about 1773. In a sale of real estate, dated June 18, 1773, the following heirs of Joshua and Deborah appear: "William of Watertown," "Martha Hagar," "Sarah Palmer," "Rebecca Bull," "William Dick Gamage, Mariner, of London," "his mother Agnes Gamage of Shrewsbury, N. J." She was laid in First Parish Cemetery, Cambridge. He married, June 22, 1710, Deborah, daughter of William Wyeth, (a son of Nicholas Wyeth, a mason, who came to New England a widower, with three children: Sarah, Mary and Nicholas, Jr. He bought an estate on the west side of Garden Street about 1645. THIRD GENERATION.

NATHANIEL³ GAMAGE (Joshua,² John¹) was born March 1, 1712-3. He was never heard of and his wife returned, with her little children, to her home in Rockport, Mass. Soon after 1795, she went with two sons and their families to Bristol, Maine, where she died in 1821, aged 104 years. She was buried on the farm, where the graves of herself and other members of her family are still to be seen. She was a small but very active woman, intelligent and quick witted. She had bright, black eyes and dark hair that never turned gray. Her activity of mind yielded to the touch of time a few years before her death, but her bodily usefulness remained to the last. He married Mary Norwood, born Oct. 18, 1717, daughter of Joshua Norwood.*

Agnes was, probably, the daughter or granddaughter of Sir William Dick of New York. land. Mrs. Jane Nicholson charged the children of her dead sister, Eliza, "to be careful of it as it was the portrait of their mother's ancestor." These papers regarding Sir William Dick were found among the papers of Rev. John William Sheringham, after his death. "Sir William Dick of Braid, Scotland, loaned to Charles First of England £52,000, in 1642. York, 1707, and last by Sir Robert Dick in 1735, but has not been paid. This has been traced by the present Baronet, Sir Page Dick, whose Grand Father was Sir Robert Dick tenth Earl of Walpole." Among the State papers at Albany, New York, are these statements: "William Dick appointed Commissioner of Indian Affairs July 13, 1734." "Gen'l Corbey recommends Capt. AMORY⁶ GAMAGE (Richard,⁵ Samuel⁴) was born at Hopkinton, Mass., July 20, 1812. He settled in Boston in 1833. In early manhood he was a school teacher, but the love of music, combined with a taste for mechanics, induced him to enter the field of manufacture. He became one of the early Piano Forte Makers of Boston, Mass. In 1849, during the gold excitement, he visited California, remaining there three years. He married, in Boston, Nov. 1, 1835, Nancy, daughter of Capt. William Lyman (a son of Ezekiel and Elizabeth Bliss Lyman. He was born at Canterbury, Conn., about 1781, whose family moved to Royalston, Vt., 1782. When a young man, he joined his brother in Canada; but, enamored with a sea life, he became a sailor—later, a mate; and, finally, captain of a trading ship. He married, at Frankfort, Me., Sept. 22, 1844, Huldah, widow of Henry Jenks, and daughter of James and Susanna (Lampher) Colson. Their home was, first, at Frankfort, where three children were born; later, at Castine; and, finally, at Lyman was lost at sea, with his ship, in 1826. His wife died at Bath, Me., March 31, 1826, aged 36 years. He was a descendant of Sir Richard Lyman.—See Lyman Genealogy.) Mr. Amory Gamage died suddenly of pneumonia, April 16, 1882, and was buried at Woodville, Mass. Mrs. Gamage married (2) Levi Hardy of Oxford, Mass. She died August 19, 1895, aged 79, and was buried in East Cemetery, Webster, Mass., in the lot of her son-in-law, E. P. Morton. Her graceful presence, loving and sympathetic nature, endeared her to a large circle of friends, who sincerely mourned her loss. After but a few days of illness, her bright, active spirit fled to its Heavenly home.

Children of Amory and Nancy Gamage were:

- i. MARY AUGUSTA, b. Aug. 4, 1836; d. Aug. 25, 1836.

He was a young man eminently endowed with every qualification to ensure a long, useful and honorable life; of a remarkably strong constitution, as shown in the long endurance of his trouble. Children (of whom it was said there were twenty-three, but which is a doubtful story), there are now known: Solomon, who remained in Charlestown; Gov. William, John, Mary, Margaret, and Anna. The last four were mentioned in Gov. William Phips' will.

2. JOHN, who is said to have been born in Charlestown, went with his father to Maine, where descendants now live. Only one son, John, has been traced by the author.
3. JOHN, who lived with and was educated by his uncle, Governor William, was promised to share equally with Spencer Bennet (the nephew of the Governor's wife, who also lived in the household) in his uncle's fortune; but the influence of his wife caused the Governor to change his will in favor of her nephew, leaving but a comparatively small sum to John Phips. The Governor told John he would give him a sufficient sum to make up an equal share. Unfortunately, the Governor died suddenly, in London, with his promise unfulfilled. John brought suit to recover. Mrs. Phips sought to compromise, but without avail. John was stubborn, and would take only an equal share, as his uncle had promised. LEARNED.

1. WILLIAM LEARNED came from Bermondsey, Suffolk County. As the name is not found in the heraldries of England, it is believed his parents were Huguenots. His wife was Goodith—probably a corruption of Judith. They came to New England in 1630, and were the first members admitted to the First Church of Charlestown—the records reading, “1632, 10 m. day 6.” He was made freeman May 14, 1630; Selectman, 1635 and 1636. He was one of the seven who, on August 14, 1642, formed the First Church of Woburn, and, in 1644, was on the first Board of Selectmen of Woburn. His wife died after 1624. He was Selectman and Constable at the time of his death, March 1, 1646. He left widow Sarah Jane, or Jane.

His son,

He married (2) Sarah Wright of Sudbury. Beside filling the office of Deacon in his Church, which was a highly honorable distinction in the Colony at that time, he was Constable in 1682, Selectman in 1690, 1693, 1695, 1697, 1700, and 1710. He died April 10, 1738, “a man of sound and consistent piety.”

4. CAPT. EDWARD, was born in Sherburn, December 2, 1705, and was Captain of Militia in 1750, and Selectman in 1745. He married, December 25, 1728, Sarah Leland, who died May 17, 1736, aged 26 years. He married (2), 1787, Abigail Morse. He died Sept. 9, 1775.

2. MARY. She was baptized Jan. 6, 1626, and married, in Woburn, July 9, 1646, Isaac Learned.

WRIGHT.

1. DOROTHY WRIGHT, a widow, came to New England before 1639, with three children: Edward, Samuel, Lydia. Her husband was Francis Wright of Bromwich Castle, Warwick County. This castle was given to Francis Wright by John Wiggan, whose daughter, Mary, he married, June 27, 1613. Mary was, evidently, Mr. Wright's first wife, and Dorothy the second wife. Mrs. Wright settled in Sudbury, where she shared in the division of meadow lands. She married (2), March 10, 1642, John Blanford.
2. CAPT. EDWARD settled in Sudbury. He served in King Philip's war, and was in the Sudbury fight of 1676, when his property was damaged by Indians £100, after which he was made Captain. He married in Boston, May 27, 1657, Mary Powers. He married (2), June 18, 1659, Hannah Upson of Sudbury. He died August 7, 1703, and his wife died May 18, 1708.

Children were: George, David, Robert, Margaret, and perhaps, James.

LELAND.

1. HENRY LELAND was born about 1625, and was the son of Hopestill Leland of Lancaster, England. He came to New England in 1643, and was a man of deeply religious character, which led him, with so many others, to seek the freedom of the New World. His wife was Margaret, daughter of James Babcock of Essex County—a brother of David Babcock. He settled in Sherburn, where he died, April 4, 1680.

His son,

2. HOPESTILL, was born November 15, 1655, and married, Nov. 5, 1678, Abigail Hill. She died October 5, 1689. He married (3) Patience Holbrook, who died in 1740. He died at Bogistow in 1729, aged 75 years.

His daughter,

3. ABIGAIL, was born in 1658. She married, in 1678, Hopestill Leland.

HOLBROOK.

1. THOMAS HOLBROOK. He came to New England in 1635, from Braintree, England, in the Rev. John Hull Company. His wife was Jane—believed to be Kingman—as Henry Kingman, in deeds, calls Thomas Holbrook brother-in-law, and which probably accounts for the Holbrooks coming in this company. Mr. Kingman was the promoter of the Company. Mr. Holbrook died at Weymouth in 1678. In his will, he charges his sons—John, William and Thomas, concerning their mother, who is weak in body, and mentions daughters Elizabeth, Ann, and Jane.

2. JOHN was born in Braintree, England. He came with his father, bringing his wife Abigail. He was a very wealthy man for his time, and was prominent in town affairs.

Children: Daniel, Thomas, born 1627, died 1675; Richard, Margaret, Samuel, Nathaniel, and Hannah.

3. HANNAH. She married John Hill of Newton before 1657. She died in 1690.

WELLINGTON.

1. ROGER WELLINGTON—(whose family claim direct descent from Ralph de Wellington, time of the Conquest, who married Joan, daughter and heir of Sir William Champernon). He settled in Charlestown in 1636, and married, 1637, Mary, eldest daughter of Dr. Richard Palgrave. He was a Selectman in 1678, and many other times until 1691. His will was made in December, 1697, and he died the following March, 1698. The will did not mention his wife.

Children were: John, born 1638; Mary, Feb. 10, 1641: Joseph, 1643; Benjamin; Olive, 1648; Palgrave, 1653.

His daughter,

2. MARY. She was born Feb. 10, 1641. She married, May 21, 1662, Henry Maddock of Watertown, and had a son, John, and a daughter, Mary. The latter married, Sept. 16, 1679, John Coolidge, Jr., of Cambridge. Mary Wellington Maddock married (2), Sept. 13, 1679, John Coolidge, Senr., of Cambridge, and had a daughter, Mary Coolidge.

Children, born in New England, were: Rebecca, 1631; John, 1634; Lydia, 1636; Bethia, 1638.

All the children were baptized in the Boston Church, where the parents still worshipped. They never transferred their membership to the Church of Charlestown. He was admitted freeman October 19, 1631, and died in 1656. His widow, who was his second wife, name unknown, moved to Roxbury, where she died March 17, 1669, aged 75 years. She was buried in Roxbury.

PHILIPS.

1. REV. GEORGE PHILIPS was the son of Christopher Philips of Rainham, St. Martins, County Norfolk. He was born in 1593, graduated at Cambridge, B. A., 1613; degree of M. A., 1617. He suffered as a Nonconformist, and cast his lot with the Puritans. He sailed for New England in the "Arabella," April 12, 1630, bringing his wife Elizabeth, and two children—Rev. Samuel and Hannah, and his brother Henry. His wife died soon after their arrival, June 12, 1630. She was buried beside Lady Arabella Johnson, both having succumbed to the hardships of the long voyage. He located in Watertown, and was the earliest of the Congregational order and discipline. It is not easy, at this time, to estimate the extent and importance of the influence of Mr. Philips in giving form and character to the civil and ecclesiastic institutions of New England. He married (2) ——— Stewart, by whom he had five more children. He died July 1, 1644.

His daughter,

2. HANNAH, was born in England. She married, in 1638, Joseph Morse of Watertown.

He was a tanner by trade. He married, in Ipswich, England, Esther Brooks. He died Oct. 10, 1678, aged 73 years.

where he was made freeman March 3, 1636. He was Deacon of the Church of Hingham, and Representative to the General Court from 1656 to 1664. His wife was Sarah Gilman. He died Nov. 20, 1691, aged 81 years, and his wife died May 26, 1700.
